DSA Accreditation

The Dalcroze Society of America offers accreditation for schools and training programs throughout the United States. DSA accredited schools maintain the minimum standards set forth by the DSA's Professional Development Committee's T² (Teacher-Training) Manual. This unprecedented community of the nation's leading practitioners of Dalcroze Education work together to help maintain the highest level of artistry, musicianship, and pedagogy. The following schools offer accredited training programs:

- Carnegie Mellon University; Pittsburgh, PA
- The Dalcroze School of the Rockies; Denver, CO
- The Eastman School; Rochester, NY
- The Hoff-Barthelson Musical School; NYC, NY
- The Longy School of Music; Boston, MA
- The Lucy Moses School; NYC, NY
- The Winchester School of Music; Boston, MA

Benefits to Studying at a DSA Accredited Institution

- The DSA is the only Eurhythmics organization in the USA formally connected to the Institut Jaques Dalcroze \(IJD\) in Geneva, the international Dalcroze training center that Jaques-Dalcroze founded.
- The DSA is the USA representative of the Fédération Internationale des Enseignants de Rythmique \(F.I.E.R.\) and DSA members are de facto members of FIER. They enjoy all the benefits of this international association.
- DSA-accredited teacher training programs share minimum standards in all areas of Dalcroze Education and ensure a rigorous, hands-on training in movement improvisation and body technique, musicianship and vocal improvisation, keyboard improvisation for movement, plastique animée, and Dalcroze pedagogical methods. While the training is challenging, it is individualized according to each student's personal and professional capabilities, and it ensures that Dalcroze teachers have all the tools and techniques they need to lead a class.
